Our History

The initial exploration trip was made toward the end of December 1871 and the town of Peace was surveyed on January 15, 1872.

The town was originally called “Peace” out of respect for Mr. Ninde, a Quaker, who was the town’s first land agent. In May of 1876 the proud people of Peace decided that they needed a more progressive name for the fast-growing city and the town was incorporated as a third-class city under the name of Sterling.

Located on the mainline of the Santa Fe, the town grew rapidly and became the principal trading point for a wide area. Sterling served as a retail center, particularly for lumber, for the entire area to the southwest, including Sylvia and Stafford.

One of the first industries was broomcorn in the 1970s. Sterling gained national attention as a “Broomcorn Capital.” Another early industry was the Sterling salt plant established in 1888. From almost its first year, the town counted flour milling as a major industry. The Farmers Co-op Union has continued to expand through the years and is now a regional operation, one of the largest in the state, and with headquarters in Sterling.

Equally important and still so today, was the establishment of Cooper (Sterling) College by the United Presbyterians in 1887. The venture was all started by a group of local civic businessmen. In 1905 the J.S. Dillon Company was founded in Sterling. This beginning has bloomed an operation of over 300 stores across the country for the Hutchinson based Dillon’s Stores. Though not in its original form, Dillon’s is still a staple of the community.

In 1916, bonds were issued by the City to purchase the George Morris Electric Light Plant from George Morris and to improve both the plant and the distribution system. In 1920 and 1923 Broadway, the main thoroughfare, was paved. The City carried 33% of the project and property owners along the route paid the balance. Street Lights were installed in 1921. Sanitary Sewer was installed in 1923.

The Sterling Chamber of Commerce annually hosts “The Old Fashioned Fourth of July Celebration” including an annual parade that has continued for over 115 years, drawing large crowds especially for the turtle races 74 years straight, and a magnificent fireworks display each year at Sterling Lake Park.

Recent developments include the investment in medical facilities and state of the art education. Business and industry are growing and expanding at a quick pace from oil exploration to farming to customer service to ethanol technologies. Good things are happening.

From medical services to support of industrial development and education, the people of Sterling have made great strides on the promise of the future.
